Tanner Yost was born in Dodge City and grew up on a family farm in southwest Kansas near Minneola. He graduated from Minneola High School and attended Oklahoma Panhandle State University prior to transferring to Kansas State University. At Kansas State University, Tanner obtained his civil engineering degree in 2012. Upon graduation, he decided to take a job with Halliburton as a field engineer. Then a year later decided to move back to Kansas and work for Kirkham Michael in Ellsworth. Today, Tanner works on projects ranging from haul routes and structure evaluations to water and sewer distribution and collection replacement projects.
